

I was looking for a removable attachment method for light model parts, that wouldn't stain paint underneath. Richard suggested a brand of poster putty that he had used in the past. I tested that brand and another. The poster putties I used were:

The paint brand I tested it on was AK Interactive's "3rd Generation Acrylics:"

I left patches of the putting on fully cured paint for a week, and then removed the putties. Neither putty left any noticeable mark or stain visible to my eye. Note that your results may vary. I'd like to do some tests on other paint brands later as well.